

University of the Pacific
Institutional Review Board
Cooperative Research Agreement

The lead institution's authorized Institutional Review Board will review cooperative research between the University of the Pacific and other universities or research institutions. The lead institution is normally the primary grantee or contractor for funded projects and/or home institution for one or more of the principal investigators. The University of the Pacific will accept documented review and approval by another institution's IRB when appropriate, through satisfactory completion of the Cooperative Research Agreement. The principal investigator from the University of the Pacific must submit this form to Research and Graduate Studies after obtaining the necessary signatures from the lead institution.
