History of the United Way

Pacific employees set a new record by pledging more than $100,000 to United Way of San Joaquin County this year. The campaign ran from October to December. Last year, employees donated $88,000 through direct contributions or paycheck deductions. This year's total is $101,316, an increase of 12 percent. The number of Keel Club members (donors pledging $500 or more) also went up from 65 in 2007 to 77 in 2008, a gain of about 18 percent.

Overall, nearly one-third of all Pacific employees pledged donations to the community through United Way this year. "The success of this year's United Way campaign demonstrates the generosity and caring of the University community," said President DeRosa. "I want to thank all that participated for your commitment to help those in need in the greater Stockton area."

PACIFIC ATHLETES RECEIVE BIG WEST AND ALL-AMERICA HONORS

Brett Manning '08 and Julie Magud '08 have been named Pacific’s Big West Scholar Athletes of the Year. They will represent Pacific at the Big West Conference Scholar Athlete Banquet in March. Manning and Magud were selected from 131 Tigers that qualified this season by maintaining a cumulative 3.0 GPA. The selection panel considers leadership qualities as well as athletic and academic performance.

Dragan Bakic '08 and Duje Kaurloto '08, earned All-America honors from the Association of Collegiate Water Polo Coaches. Bakic was named to the All-America third team, while Kaurloto earned All-America honorable mention. Bakic is just the second men's water polo player in school history to become a four-time All-American.

STAFF AND FACULTY DEVELOPMENT AND TRAINING AT PACIFIC

As people look at the new year with plans for self improvement, professional development moves higher on the list of priorities. Staff and faculty development at Pacific has recently taken a giant step forward and opportunities abound to fulfill those resolutions. With the two new hires of business technology training coordinator and the new director for the Center for Teaching and Learning, staff and faculty development and training at Pacific is poised to address the broad needs for training and development for Pacific staff and faculty. This triad of training has not been complete for some time, but is now staffed and in full swing. Exciting new training opportunities are on the horizon and the training staff are anxious to inform Pacific Staff and Faculty and to open channels for feedback that will enable training to continue to improve to meet staff and faculty needs.

PERSONNEL DEVELOPMENT AND TRAINING

Kathleen Quinn, staff training and development manager, has been at Pacific since fall 2005. She conducted a comprehensive training needs assessment shortly after coming on board and has been developing training programs to meet staff needs. Quinn has expanded the new staff orientation program and developed and deployed a wide variety of development opportunities on topics such as business writing, emotional intelligence, leadership development, time management and diversity. She has also deployed supervisory training and performance review training. She has received very positive feedback from both staff and faculty on the courses delivered so far and has even had to add sessions for popular topics.

BUSINESS TECHNOLOGY TRAINING

In the fall 2006, the staff IT trainer left Pacific, and that position has just been filled with the recent appointment of Kim Cose as Business Technology Training Coordinator. Cose has been at Pacific for 18 years, 13 of those in the Office of Information Technology. While the position was vacant, University administration moved the position from CPCE to the division of Business and Finance, and Vice President Cavanaugh requested a full assessment of the needs of the position before a new person was hired.

The assessment, conducted by Sondra Roemyn, director of business assessment and technology services, determined that training on business technology and software used ubiquitously at Pacific’s three campuses was the primary need, and that since the job was too overwhelming for one person, the position would be more appropriately designated a training coordinator. The position is responsible for both delivering technology training and working collaboratively with subject matter experts in each division to co-develop and co-deliver other training opportunities, where appropriate. In addition, the new position will be supported by a training budget that provides for the acquisition of equipment and dedicated training space will be provided. These last two issues were a consistent challenge for the previous trainer.

Cose has already begun meeting with staff on all three campuses to begin building a framework for training needs at each campus. She has deployed some training sessions, primarily the Introduction to Business Technology and the use of the Banner 7 Computer-Based Training (CBT) located within InsidePacific for Banner Navigation, and will be able to schedule more opportunities when equipment is in place in the next month. Cose will share the Human Resources training room for technology training. She hopes to bring about consistency to training materials and to incorporate more computer based training and on-line tutorials, enabling staff to have “on demand” training opportunities that can be fit into busy schedules.

FACULTY DEVELOPMENT AND TRAINING

The Center for Teaching and Learning (CTL), originally established as the Center for Teaching Excellence, was formed to support the pursuit of excellence in teaching and learning. CTL provides services and resources to assist faculty in becoming more effective, active teachers and scholars. After the previous director left, the position was expanded and Jace Hargis was named in July 2007 as the assistant provost for faculty development and director of the Center for Teaching Learning.

A wide range of services are provided and are in development by CTL, including: speakers, workshops, seminars and demonstrations; confidential classroom observations; reviews of course material, syllabi, Blackboard, etc.; and small group student perception evaluations. The Center is also building a library of resources that faculty members may check out. The Center’s Website is continually being updated with new opportunities, information and resources.

Hargis, Quinn and Cose are developing a central website that will provide a “one stop shopping” place for all staff and faculty development opportunities, including on line registration. At this time, information on the human resources and business technology training opportunities can be accessed at go.pacific.edu/training. Faculty development workshops and presentations offered by CTL are posted on the Center’s Website at web.pacific.edu/x11676.xml.

THOMAS KRISÉ TAKES THE HELM AT COP

Dr. Thomas W. Krise came on board in January as dean of College of the Pacific. Prior to coming to Pacific, Krise was a professor and chair of English at the University of Central Florida since 2005. He is also president of the Society of Early Americanists, an international, interdisciplinary association of scholars specializing in the literature and culture of the Americas up to the 19th century. “We are very excited about the appointment of Tom Krise as Dean of the College,” said Provost Phil Gilbertson. “He brings an unusually diverse set of experiences and leadership roles to the position.”

His distinguished 22-year career in the US Air Force includes twelve years on the English faculty at the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs. He was also a Senior Military Fellow of the Institute for National Strategic Studies in Washington, D.C. and Vice Director of the National Defense University Press.

Krise earned a bachelor’s degree in Western European history from the US Air Force Academy, master’s degrees in human resources management from Central Michigan University and English language and literature from the University of Minnesota, and a doctorate in English language and literature from the University of Chicago.

“It is a special privilege to lead College of the Pacific,” Dr. Krise said. “I look forward to contributing to Pacific’s long history of distinguished education, pioneering innovation, and vibrant institutional culture.”

NEW EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR FOR MARKETING AND UNIVERSITY COMMUNICATION

Richard Rojo joined Pacific in January as the new executive director of Marketing and University Communications. He will guide strategies for future marketing and communication campaigns, internal communications, and development of the website. He also will manage press relations and oversee publications.

Rojo said the University’s strong reputation attracted him to the position. “Pacific has so many things going for it: a warm and dedicated faculty and staff; incredible campus beauty; smart and talented students; and academic excellence,” Rojo said. “I am truly excited about joining that culture and helping to position the university for the future.”

Prior to coming to Pacific, Rojo was at Sacramento State, where he oversaw advertising, website, e-mail, publications and brochures. From 2001 to 2006 he was director of Marketing and Communications for the UC Davis Mondavi Center, where he oversaw Mondavi Center’s branding and opening campaigns; created new standards for brochure design, web and e-mail marketing for the performing arts; started a student marketing program; and helped define a new model for university-based arts-presenting.

“Richard Rojo’s creative approach has been highly successful in marketing organizational identity and using diverse communications strategies,” said President DeRosa. “His years of experience will serve Pacific well as we seek to elevate the university’s national visibility and strengthen communications with alumni and friends.”
