“

My SIS education prepared me really well for a career in finance. SIS taught me to be comfortable in any competitive, multicultural environment, as well as versatile and fearless in pursuing an international career. Today, living in Dubai, I am the Regional Business Development Director for the Middle East for the STM Group, where I work throughout the Arabian Gulf region and India. SIS definitely helped me stand out in a field full of MBAs.

Amy Curlee
B.A. in International Relations, Class of 2006

“

Guiding SIS students as they transform from curious first-years to thoughtful and analytical adults at graduation is inspirational. Their ability to communicate, and to draw on history, economic thought, political reasoning, and a deep understanding of how culture shapes contemporary world issues is superb as they move into their careers, whether in government, business, or the non-profit sector. They have different backgrounds and beliefs, but I always trust that their perspectives will make mine richer.
